

Federal Income Taxation
Fall 2012
Professor Miranda Perry Fleischer

Description:

This course provides an introduction to basic principles of tax policy generally as well as an in-depth analysis of the major structural components of the current federal individual income tax system. The course primarily emphasizes how the current tax rules actually work, but will also cover policy issues such as whether the current rules are fair and how we as a class think they should work. Some attention may also be paid to basic tax planning techniques (that is, how tax advisors may use particular rules to their clients' advantage).

The course is taught largely using a problem-based method; the problems assigned for each unit provide a framework for us to discuss the applicable rules and policies. The problems and readings for each Unit will be available on the class TWEN page. Please be sure to log on to Westlaw and add our class's TWEN page to your course list.

Class meets from 9:00 to 10:15 on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday mornings in Room 301.

Required Materials:

Michael J. Graetz and Deborah H. Schenk, Federal Income Taxation: Principles and Policies (6th edition, 2009).

Daniel J. Lathrope, Selected Federal Taxation Statutes and Regulations, 2013 version. (You need the most recent edition, published in July 2012. It reads "2013" on the spine.)

Optional Materials:

Marvin A. Chirelstein and Lawrence A. Zelenak, Federal Income Taxation (12th edition, 2012).

Larry D. Ward, Problems and Solutions for Basic Federal Income Taxation (2007).

Grading, Attendance, and Class Participation:

Ninety percent of your final grade will be based on a three-hour written final examination. The exam will be limited open book. You may refer to the statutory compilation, the casebook, any supplemental materials that I hand out or post on TWEN, your class notes, and any outline you have prepared in whole or in part. You may not refer to commercial outlines or treatises. You may use a calculator.

You are responsible for all the Code sections, regulations, and readings assigned, whether or not discussed in class, unless I specifically state otherwise. From time to time, in class I will assign additional Code provisions and regulations that were not initially assigned. Those are fair game also. In other words, everything we cover is potentially on the exam unless I specifically state otherwise.

Ten percent of your final grade will be based on meaningful class preparation and participation. For each class, you are expected to have done the assigned readings carefully and to have attempted to work through the assigned problems in advance. When I call on you, I expect you to be able to explain how you approached each of the assigned problems. I also expect you to be able to discuss the assigned readings and any policy issues raised by the readings and the problems. Our schedule is tentative. If you miss class, it is your responsibility to ask a classmate how much material we covered and to prepare the appropriate material for the next class.

I will call on students randomly throughout the semester. This is not to embarrass you, but rather for your benefit. Over the years, I have found that cold-calling results in higher levels of class preparation and participation, which benefits not only the student “on call” but the rest of the class as well by ensuring a higher level of discussion. I understand, however, that sometimes life gets in the way and not everyone can be prepared every day. To that end, if you see me before class and request that I not call on you on a given day, I will honor that request. It is far better for you to come to class and ask me not to call on you than to miss class.

Attendance is mandatory. Due to the large amount of class discussion and the use of the problem method, in which we collaborate to work through the problems together, you are all learning from each other as well as from me. Failing to attend class and/or repeatedly failing to prepare for class harms not only yourself but the class’s overall experience. The fact that ten percent of your grade is based on preparation and participation does not render attendance optional or waive any of the law school’s attendance rules.

Supplemental Class Session:

On Friday, September 14, we will have a supplemental class session immediately following the regular class session. This session will cover basic time value of money concepts. It is mandatory if you are not already familiar with the time value of money and terms like present value and future value. If you are already familiar with these concepts (perhaps you took several finance classes as an undergraduate, or have already worked in the financial sector) you may leave class at the normal time. Class sessions that discuss the time value of money later in the semester will proceed as if everyone has a basic understanding of the concept.

Contact Information and Office Hours:

Office 432
303.492.6278
miranda.fleischer@colorado.edu

When not teaching, I generally work in my office and welcome you to stop by or to make appointments to do so. In addition, I will have set office hours on Thursdays from 1:30 to 3:00 so that there is a time when I am “guaranteed” to be there. In other words, Thursday office hours are a “floor” and not a “ceiling.”

Tentative Schedule:

A list of the topics we will cover this semester and the order in which we will cover them follows. The readings and problems for each Unit will be posted on the class website as the semester unfolds, with ample time for you to prepare for each class. The assignments for roughly the first month have already been posted. (Because the assignment for each Unit includes reading from the casebook, statutes, regulations, a problem set, and occasional supplemental materials), it is impractical to list the assignments here.

The following schedule is extremely tentative and will almost certainly change depending upon our pace. Depending on what interests us as a class this semester, we will spend more or less time on certain units than predicted below. Every class moves at a different pace. To that end, I cannot indicate on which dates we will cover a given topic. With that in mind, unless I state otherwise at the end of class, for the next class, you should go ahead and prepare the reading and problems for the next Unit. For Units projected to take more than one class, I will indicate to you how much to prepare for each class. If class ends and you are not sure what we are going to cover next, please ask me.

Unit I: Introduction

- A. Tax Policy Basics (1 ½ days; August 28 and 30)
- B. Structural Overview (1 ½ days; August 30 and 31)

Unit II: What is Income?

- A. Form of Receipt (2 days, starting September 4)
- B. Fringe Benefits (3 days)
- C. Gifts, Bequests and Prizes (2 days)
- D. Basis Recovery (3 days)
- E. Realization (3 days)
- F. Borrowed Funds (3 days)
- G. Debt, Basis, and Amount Realized (3 days)
- H. Misc. Exclusions from Income, Tax Expenditures, and Tax Capitalization (1 ½ days)

Unit III: Deductions and Credits

- A. The “Mixed” Expenses of Working (3 days)
- B. Business Expenses (1 ½ days)
- C. Capitalized Expenses (2 days)
- D. Depreciation (3 days)
- E. Losses (2 days)

Unit IV: Characterization (3 days)Unit V: Non-recognition (1 day)*Unit VI: Personal Deductions and Credits (2 days)*Review: 1 day