Barack Obama is charting an alternative course to re-election should he be elected to a third term. Obama strategists hope for Democratic victories in the Rust Belt and Rocky Mountain states he won in 2008, and some states he did not, in calculating that regional flukes but the start of a trend that will make Democrats competitive there for years. The biggest challenge for Republicans is a leftward shift in the electorate as unemployments remains high, what buoyed graphics of formerly Republican states in the close Senate race in 2010, as well as Virginias and North Carolina. With growing cities and suburbs, they are populated by increasing numbers of people who are effectively absorbing the emissions from all the world’s cars and trucks. As the climate warms, scientists say, there are more frequent forest fires and wildfires. The trees spanning many of the mountain sides of western Montana glow at the beginning of autumn. The trees are under stress. So are the Atlas cedarsof the Siberian forest. Trees are under stress because of rising temperatures. The Earth’s forests in distress. Ther e are signs of distress these days. The reason is that, while a majority of the world’s people now live in cities, they are more often found in the forests. The forest is the lungs of the world, the one of the world’s largest habitats. The forest is the lungs of the world, the one of the world’s largest habitats. The forest is the lungs of the world, the one of the world’s largest habitats. The forest is the lungs of the world, the one of the world’s largest habitats. The forest is the lungs of the world, the one of the world’s largest habitats.
Forests, one promising path for slowing climate change, are facing threats to the health of the planet and to their own survival. A recent study found that more than 4,200 inmates at eight prisons in California have been refusing state-issued meals since Monday, according to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. The prisoners have been held in various parts of the state, including the San Quentin State Prison, where some of the hunger strikers are housed. The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said on Tuesday that it was monitoring the situation closely and that it was providing medical care to those who needed it.

The hunger strike comes as California is facing a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.”

The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.”

The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.”

The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.”

The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.”

The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.

In a statement, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation said it was “monitoring the situation closely and providing medical care to those who need it.” The department added that it was “determined to keep our communities, staff, and inmates safe.” The California prison system has been criticized for its treatment of inmates, and the hunger strike comes as the state is faced with a budget crisis that has led to the closure of many state prisons and the release of thousands of inmates. The situation has been exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a surge in the state’s inmate population and has put a strain on the prison system.